President of Brigham Young University

Foreword

It is with humility that we pause here to acknowledge that great spirit of Brigham Young University which pushes on and on to achievement no matter what obstacles may block its path.

The fact that financial conditions make it impossible for us to have a Banyan this year has not dampened the desire for something to aid us in the future to re-live in memory these many happy days at Brigham Young.

This Scrapbook is the result of such spirit on the part of a majority of the student body.

As the rising sun is but the promise of a glorious day ahead, so is our University of today, rich in attainment, but the assurance of a golden future to come. We have, in the pages to follow, pictured a few of the activities of this year which probably will be interesting to the most students and the buildings around which all activity takes place; but, just as the gem is ever richer than its setting, so these monumental edifices are but fitting temples for the higher and nobler development of character, mind, and soul.

Our efforts will have been justified if, for the present and the golden years to come, we have helped you set forth... at least in spirit... the story of the Brigham Young University of our time... a University in which greater achievement has but kindled the desire for greater progress.

THE years fly by pretty rapidly. The outcome of a few athletic contests matters little. It's the cumulative and dominant and genuine spirit that counts. Brigham Young University's athletic past is studded with gems; its future is inviting and challenging. And it may be faced confidently, for the Cougar spirit obviously is compounded of vigor, enthusiasm, loyalty and courage and is built on glorious achievement.

In the Words of the Professors:—

DEAN OF WOMEN—

Prospects never were better for the best social, scholastic and spiritual year in our history. The attitude of the students has thru a little skimping tended toward a more democratic student body. The students are showing a pronounced earnestness and wholesome seriousness in obtaining everything that college life has to offer.—Nettie Neff Smart.

THE COLLEGE OF APPLIED SCIENCE—

The College of Applied Science will celebrate its tenth birthday on January 25, 1932. During this period, over 200 men and women have undertaken the bachelor's degree, most of whom have found places of prominence in their respective fields. This year the College can celebrate its ten years of service with the satisfaction of continued growth.

The faculty is strengthened this year by the addition of a new member to the staff, Mr. Seth Shaw, to teach horticulture during the winter quarter, and the return from leave of absence of Miss Vilate Elliott, who went around the world with the Floating University. We are looking forward next year to the return of Professor Laval S. Morris, head of the department of horticulture, who has been at Harvard for the two years past.—Dr. Lowry Nelson, Dean.

THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES—

In his later years Sir Isaac Newton wrote: "I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only a boy playing on the seashore, and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother or prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

My wish for the students of the College of Arts and Sciences is that they shall preserve a youthful curiosity in classroom, laboratory, library and shop; and that out of the romantic search for truth they shall find elements which will aid in the successful integration of their personalities.—Dr. Carl F. Eyring, Dean.

THE COLLEGE OF COMMERCE—

Although just entering upon its eleventh year, the College of Commerce is second largest in enrollment at Brigham Young University. Its growth has been steady and continuous.

The aim of the College is to instill into the lives of its students high standards of business integrity and to train them technically to meet the complex standards of modern commercial life. A large percentage of its graduates has gone into advanced fields of study at Eastern and Western institutions. The showing made by its students has been very credible.—Herald R. Clark, Acting Dean.

THE COLLEGE OF EDUCATION—

Brigham Young University is known far and near as the great training center for teachers in the inter-mountain West. The responsibility for this work centers in the College of Education. Its faculty administers all the professional work offered to qualify for teaching service.

The training received in this college qualifies for various types of educational work, as teaching on the elementary, Junior and Senior high school levels, supervision and administration. Since prospective high school teachers must qualify in the subject matter in the various lines, it is obvious that students may major in any of the departments of the University. But no matter what the major line, in the training schools of this college they receive their practical teaching and from this college they are recommended for and obtain placement in the teaching service. The College of Education has become one of the leading professional schools of the University.—Dr. Amos N. Merrill, Dean.

THE COLLEGE OF FINE ARTS—

The College of Fine Arts is carrying on as well as it possibly can, considering the handicap of Dean de Jong's absence. He is at Stanford University enjoying a year of graduate study, far removed from the many cares of his office in the College Building.

The morale of the College was never better. In the various departments of instruction, art, music and dramatic art, the number and spirit of the students was never better. The reputation of the "Y" as a center of art is growing from year to year.—Dr. Lowry Nelson, Acting Dean.

GRADUATE SCHOOL—

Some 260 graduate courses are offered—many more than last year, with better library and laboratory facilities and a more scholarly faculty than ever before.—Dr. Christen Jensen, Dean.

SUMMER SESSION—

The Summer Session of the Brigham Young University represents a full quarter. Because of the type of student body it is one continuous social and intellectual feast. The efficient home faculty is always supplemented and enriched by visiting professors.

The lecture course on world problems proves always to be instructive and entertaining. Every department of the University is represented with a fine offering of courses. Special attention is given to the preparation of a rich curriculum for graduate students.

The Summer quarter is a time for meeting friends and acquaintances of other years. Nothing is left undone to make it both instructive and pleasant. The second term at Aspen Grove behind Mt. Timpanogos has become a symbol of a perfect Alpine vacation.

The administration welcomes all who desire a pleasant and profitable summer to attend.—Dr. Hugh M. Woodward, Dean.

Religion up to date and enduring consists in helping God to build human character.—Dr. George H. Brimhall.

A crooked road is always longer than a straight one.—W. H. Boyle.

Meeting each day's obligations with courage and fortitude leads to happiness.—Emma Brown.

Chas. W. Eliot said "there is in each of us a spirit dull or bright, pure or foul, petty or grand, that looks out of the eyes, sounds in the voice, and appears in the manners of each of us: it is our personality."—C. S. Boyle.

"Home is a domestic sanctuary—
Wrought out of desire—
Built into memory—
Where kindred bonds unite the family
In sharing labors,
Leisure,
Joy and Sorrow."

—FLUENE WILLIAMS

—Elizabeth Cannon.

"There is another way to do it that you haven't yet tried."—Benjamin F. Cummings.

A book becomes a masterpiece in so far as it has the fine art qualities of creative expression written in and illuminated with a sort of home-made finishing touch of individuality.—E. H. Eastmond.

"Live to learn, and learn to live
If you want to give men knowledge,
You must get it, ere you give."
—Vilate Elliott.

There is no cash better than good credit—"s": if you will always keep one or the other you will never be broke.—John E. Hayes.

Few experiences develop industry, power and self-reliance like the successful mastery of a difficult problem.—Wayne B. Hales.

"The rock pages of Nature's History Book unfolds many beautiful romances of the past."—George H. Hansen.

"And from here we would start, where she pledged me her heart, on the trail, on the trail of the 'Y'."—William F. Hanson.

Life's journey would be limited and troublesome if there were no service stations on the highways.—E. H. Holt.

The wisdom of age in youth gives the energy of youth in age.—J. M. Jensen.

"It's good to have money and the things that money can buy, but it's good, too, to check up once in a while and make sure you haven't lost the things that money can't buy."—Wilma Jeppson.

The pictures throughout the school buildings and the work in the art classes are primarily for the purpose of increasing the joy of living, stimulating a love for beauty in nature, and creating a desire for the finer and more worthy products of man.—Bent F. Larsen.

In the Words of the Professors:--

In giving do we get the most; in mourning do we love the most; in working do we rest the most.—A. C. Lambert.

In years to come this book of accumulated experiences in picture and in story will provide a wonderful opportunity for a "check up" on what one's ideas and ambitions once were.—Thomas L. Martin.

A well-balanced and practical education includes a knowledge and appreciation of the Fine Arts.—Franklin Madsen.

It is gratifying to find, as one travels about, our Brigham Young University students doing such excellent work.—Florence Jepperson Madsen.

If I were to give advice to students, it would be, "understand the calculus, then start your education."—Milton Marshall.

Giving assails the citadel of human selfishness, the energy of spiritual growth.—Chas. E. Maw.

Even without the accustomed record, may our friendships and joyful memories continue to live.—Elmer Miller.

In this fascinating play called "life", whether on the stage or off, play your parts with that sincerity, exuberance of spirit and flare, with carries courage, joy and the love of living into the hearts of men.—Alonzo Morley.

Life holds but few satisfactions that equals the joy of successful self-directed work.—Mary J. Ollorton.

Fact and fancy should unite
In defense of truth and right.

—Alfred Osmond.

Your character is revealed by your voice, your intelligence by your vocabulary.—T. Earl Pardoe.

It is our privilege to work with the children--

"To whom is given
So much of earth
So much of heaven."

—Hermese Peterson.

May you have many happy memories of this wonderful year at Brigham Young University.—M. Wilford Poulson.

To appreciate the best that has been thought and felt has always been one of the objectives of literature.—Alice Louise Reynolds.

The growing attitude at the University toward better music is encouraging.—LeRoy J. Robertson.

I find that some people waste most of their time when they are busiest.—Robert Sauer.

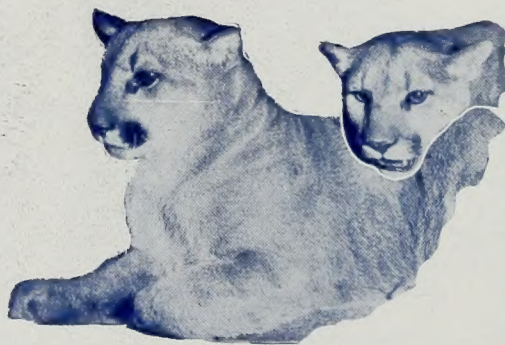

The Y Scrapbook is another evidence that 1931-32 offers the best education for the least money in the memory of man—let's increase our capital in education at these bargain prices.—Kiefer B. Sauls.

A trained mind plus a trained hand makes for a fuller life.—W. H. Snell.

History broadens one's sympathies and increases one's appreciation of one's heritage from the past.—William J. Snow.

The main aim of the zoological work at B. Y. U. is to lead the students into an acquaintance with the fauna of this region and establish in them an abiding love for nature.—Vasco M. Tanner.

Homes of the future will be judged not by houses and furnishings but by the quality of the individuals it sends forth to meet the problems of life.—Effie Warnick.
